Roleplay: Workplace Conversation

Manager:

We need someone to lead this new project. I think John should do it.

Employee A (Anna):

But I have more experience with this type of project. Why not consider me?

Manager:

Well, Anna, you might get busy with family responsibilities. John is more reliable.

Employee A (Anna):

That's not fair! My personal life has nothing to do with my professional skills.

Roleplay: Classroom Situation

Teacher:

Okay, who wants to solve this math problem on the board?

Teacher (to the class):

Maybe one of the boys can do it. Girls usually don't like math.

Student (Maria):

Excuse me, I like math a lot! I can solve it.

Roleplay: Daily Life

Friend 1:

Let's plan the party. Sarah, you can cook, and Mike, you can buy the drinks.

Sarah:
